1	Student		Type of resource e.g. Website, journal, newspaper, TV interview etc	Currency: how timely is the information?	Relevance: does the information meet your needs?	Authority: Who or what is the source of the information?	Accuracy: How reliable and accurate is the information?	Purpose: What purpose of this information?
16	Philippe	http://journals.cambridge.org/action/displayAbstract?fromaid=2556776	journal article	Published 11th of November 2008	The article is written by a professor in politics	Cambridge Journals Colin Leys Professor in Politics	This information is accurate because an expert has written this article.	To express that happens in markets.
17	Rebecca	http://www.unodc.org/newsletter/200601/page004.html	News report		yes because it talks about world corruption not just a specific place, and how its been affecting us economically	UNODC organization	pretty reliable	to inform people state we are in global corruption
18	Safi	interview with angolan citizen that has been a victim of a specific case of corruption	interview that I have done myself with real angolan citizens that have been effected by a specific case of corruption		yes definitely as I am doing a podcast/documentary, though I cant film the person I am interviewing as he doesnt want to be recognized	an angolan citizen, a maid and probably a driver that have been effected by a specific case of corruption in angola.	depending if the person is telling the truth, it can either be reliable or not.	to find out why it is bad and what that is so bad. Affects maids and who are part of company.
