The purpose of the workshop: to develop the following understandings:

- Children (and teachers) have beliefs about what good reading/writing is which affects how they learn.
- Inquiry is a philosophical stance that underlies everything we do in school.
- The PYP holds a specific philosophy and belief system about the teaching of reading and writing to which we have a responsibility to adhere.
- Reading and writing are tools for thinking about the self and the world.
- There are authentic opportunities for the development of reading and writing through the units of inquiry.
- There are connections between oral, visual and written language
- A balanced literacy curriculum comprises of the three interdependent aspects:
 - learning language
 - learning about language and
 - learning through language.
- Reading and writing in the PYP can be supported by a variety of resources that align with the philosophy of the programme.

Participants should bring:

- Making the PYP happen: a curriculum framework for international primary education (2007)
- A completed unit planner on which the participant has collaborated
- The school's programme of inquiry
- Resources that would be useful to share with fellow participants regarding reading/writing (including children's literature, professional resources, samples of student work)
